

FINE ART PRINTING AUSTRALIA

2024 PRICE LIST

Fine art prints are usually cut with a border to accommodate framing, so the paper size will be approximately 10% - 20% larger than the image. If asked to produce a print at a standard paper size, I may need to resize the image to accommodate the border and will do so unless instructed otherwise.

Prices for prints on specialty media may vary based on price and availability. In such cases, and for large orders, a deposit may be required to cover the expense of obtaining stock.

Test strips feature 100% crops (or higher for enlargements) to assess any critical print details such, as shadow tonality, colour response or overall sharpness, prior to printing a full run.

I always assess the quality of the files I receive prior to printing so I will inform you of any potential issues which might arise because of resolution issues, colour casts or over-sharpening. I can advise on how these issues might be fixed or I can do it myself. Most issues can be fixed quite simply at no charge to the client, but more extensive image editing work may entail a nominal fee.

The prices quoted below are referenced to standard paper sizes. However, I usually print from 15m rolls of paper so I can print to any size or shape you require so long as the shortest side is 1100mm.

If I am asked to print an image of a different proportion at a set paper size (for instance, a square image at A3), I will size it such that it will fit within an A3 sleeve and trim the excess. If you would like it done differently, please let me know.

ESTIMATES OF POSTAGE COSTS

Postage costs vary depending on the size of the order, but I will quote on postage before proceeding with the job.

Prints A2 and smaller are shipped flat, sandwiched between two sheets of 5mm foamcore with the print surface protected by a sheet of tissue paper. I charge a $5 packing fee plus postage per package.

Larger prints are rolled and shipped in tubes, the prices of which are quoted above. I generally ship no more than 3 prints per tube but tubes can be taped together to form one package which lowers the cost of postage.

Shipping costs are usually around $10 for standard post within Australia and $25 - $30 international for individual prints. Prices for bulk orders will vary based on size and destination but, for reference, a shipment of 20 A3 prints usually costs around $30 to ship within Australia. I can also ship prints directly to your buyers if you are selling online.

If you have any questions or special requirements which are not covered in the above, please do not hesitate to contact me via the details below.
